REHAB FACILITY CELEBRATES EARTH WEEK

Hoffman Estates, Ill. (April 30, 2010) – Alden Poplar Creek Rehabilitation and Health Care Center transformed into a forest, April 18 – April 24, in order to celebrate Earth Week.

Residents and guests were invited into the ‘forest’ located on the lower level of the rehabilitation center to watch a special animal show put on by the Bartlett Nature Center and pet wild animals, including lizards, snakes and birds.

“The animal show was just one of the many special activities we encouraged our residents to take part in during their rehab stay with us,” says Jeff Russell, administrator, Alden Poplar Creek. “Here at Alden Poplar Creek, our goal is to help individuals recover or improve physical functioning so they can return home as quickly and safely as possible. We believe that individuals recover more quickly and more completely if they enjoy staying at the place where they are rehabilitating. That is why we provide so many unique and exciting programs on a daily basis. We want our residents to focus on their therapy and getting better – and leave the rest to us.”
